LAI'D TO REST

LARGE COMPANY OF FRIENDS
PRESENT AT FUNERAL
OF MR. WEST

The Elks' clubrooms were filled to their capacity Monday afternoon when a large assemblage of loving and sympathizing friends gathered to pay homage to a departed friend, Mr. William Herman West, who passed to the higher life Saturday morning. The remains were taken from the Pulliam undertaking parlors to the Elks' headquarters Monday forenoon, where they lay in state from 10 o'clock until 2, the hour of the funeral. During these hours hundreds of the brother Elks of the departed as well as other friends passed the bier and looked for the last time upon the countenance of one they loved.

Christian Science services were held, the service being read by Mr. Morris Schick, formerly reader of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Glendale. Miss Hellyer, soloist of the First Church, with Mrs. Alex Mitchell as accompanist, sang one of Mrs. Eddy's compositions, "Savior, Show Me How to Go," also "Oh, He Whom Jesus Loved Has Truly Spoken." The Elks formed an honorary escort and conducted a short service at the grave in Forest Lawn cemetery. The pallbearers were James W. Horne, Paul Hearst, A. M. Parker, George Paine, Carlyle Blackwell, Tom Lingham, Jas. A. Farrell and H. W. Whaley.

The floral pieces, mementoes of love and sympathy, were perhaps the most elaborate, beautiful and numerous ever seen at a funeral in Glendale. Members of the Christian Science church, the Elks' lodge and the Kalem company were present at the funeral services in large numbers and expressed in this way their love for the departed, as well as their heartfelt sympathy for the wife.

VACATION PLAYGROUNDS CLOSE
—HIGH SCHOOL WINS
TWO LAST GAMES

With the end of August comes the close of the summer playgrounds. It is with regret that the children of the three grounds, so thoughtfully provided for them by the Parent-Teacher federation, see their supervision come to an end. The coaching and care they have received have vastly benefited them and on all sides is heard the desire for some continuance of the system.

The Union high school playground ball team closed the summer season with victories. Saturday the first Glendale team played the Broadway department store team and won by a score of 19-1. This was a walk-away for the Glendale boys, who showed the advantage they possess from having been schooled and trained all summer. The city team showed up very poorly beside them.

Monday morning the second team went to Tropic and took the second game from them, by a score of 11-7. In this game the Verdugo brothers as the battery showed the value of their skill by holding their opponents to four hits and getting eight strike-outs.

Up to the eighth inning the Glendale team played a losing game. Then with all the bases filled Crandall stepped to the plate and let in scores sufficient to give Glendale a lead by several points. T. Verdugo, Powers and Eckles exhibited some splendid hitting for Glendale, while their teammates fielded well through the whole course of the game.

These teams will meet for the third game of the series Friday morning at Tropic.

WHO ARE THE WINNERS?

The question in the above heading will be asked next Saturday evening after the close of the Evening News contest. When the answer is given various comments will be made. The eyes of the people of the Glendale community are turned on these contestants. The names of Miss Virginia Graham, Morse Freeman, Mrs. A. D. Pearce, Newton McGillis, Miss Ruth Wright, Miss Cora Hickman and Mrs. J. C. May are known of in every household. Every one of these candidates has well-wishing friends who will be disappointed at the announcement that their favorite candidate has not won first prize.

It means considerable to be a leader in a contest of this kind. The rank of standing indicates to a degree the amount of work done, and people are admired on account of their working ability.

In some instances only a few thousand votes will be required to give a

CLEAN WATER TO DRINK

STATE BUREAU OF SANITARY ENGINEERING WILL COMBAT
TYPHOID FEVER

Clean water to drink—this is the long first step to take toward making typhoid fever as rare in California as the mastodon or the sabre-toothed tiger.

To help people get clean water to drink and to help prevent the present wicked and inexcusable sacrifice of several hundred innocent lives every year to typhoid fever, the state board of health has just established a bureau of sanitary engineering, with its offices and laboratories at the University of California, and has appointed as chief engineer and director of the bureau, Chester G. Gillespie, of high reputation as a sanitary engineer and one of the first men who ever completed the full professional course in sanitary engineering in the university. He received his professional training at the hands of Charles Gilman Hyde, professor of sanitary engineering in the University of California, who for a number of years past, as consulting engineer of the state board of health, has been doing work of great value for the improvement of public health conditions in California. Since Gillespie's graduation eight years ago he has been actively at work designing and building chlorination and filter-plant, sewage-disposal systems, waterworks, etc., in various parts of the United States.

The state's new sanitary engineer has only just arrived in Berkeley to begin his work. Already requests are waiting for him from more than thirty California towns for advice as to how they ought to go about getting clean water and how to protect themselves against typhoid, intestinal complaints of children, and other water-borne diseases.

Not only as to water-supply problems will the new bureau be of great service, but also in the matter of sewage-disposal, for advice will be given to the engineers and authorities of towns and villages throughout California as to how best to treat sewage so as to render it harmless to the community which seeks to dispose of it, and to towns downstream as well.

There are already laws requiring that all public water supplies must have permits from the state board of health, approving the sanitary quality of sources and supply. There are laws, also, that a community must not discharge sewage into inland waters, such as lakes or rivers, nor into tidal estuaries, without permits from the state board of health. In order that this legislation may be carried out, the new bureau will make a careful study of water-supply and sewage-disposal conditions throughout the whole state.

Remarkable advance has been made in California in the last few years in reducing the death rate from typhoid. Last year only about three-fifths as many people died of typhoid in California, in proportion to population, as did four years earlier. In 1910 there were 477 deaths from typhoid, which, with a population of 2,386,000, represented a death rate of 19.9 per hundred thousand from this one disease. In 1914, with an estimated population of 2,763,000, there were 374 deaths, or 13.54 per hundred thousand.

Yet, most of these 374 deaths were totally unnecessary!

Among the great factors which brought about this gratifying reduction were the work of the state board of health in arousing the interest of the whole community in the fight against typhoid, the investigations of typhoid outbreaks by the state hygienic laboratory, such as its investigation resulting in the discovery of one woman, a typhoid-carrier, who had given the disease to ninety-four people by preparing one single dish of spaghetti, and the work of the state board of health in sending free to any physician in California anti-typhoid vaccine, prepared at the state hygienic laboratory at the university, a vaccine by the use of which anyone who desires may be immunized against typhoid fever.

LIFE IN REAL ESTATE

J. F. LILLY SAYS CONDITIONS IN GLENDALE ARE GETTING MORE FAVORABLE

Glendale appears to be one part of California where confidence in the local real estate market has never died out. The very worst of the bad times has passed over this city and left its inhabitants, shaken to a certain extent, but never wholly submerged nor at any time without confidence that the dry land would reappear. Whatever floods may have overwhelmed other sections of the country or the state, Glendale has raised its head above the raging waters of depression and confidently looked for the better times.

That, too, has been the opinion and practice of Joseph F. Lilly of the firm of Lilly & Whiting, which has been doing a steady business all along, through good report and ill report, in real estate, mortgages, insurance, loans and appraisements. Mr. Lilly said to a representative of the Glendale Evening News: "There is today a more active demand than there has been for a long time for real estate of all kinds. Within the past month I have noticed quite an advance in the department of rentals in particular. This firm has placed quite a large number of new families in homes within that period. Many of those families will doubtless become permanent residents of the city. This turn in business is particularly visible in the increased activity of the transfer and express companies in the city. Even in this hot weather they are having more than they can do to move in the families that are choosing Glendale as their home."

"Conditions in Glendale are getting better daily. There can never be any general revival of business throughout the country without this city feeling the benefit of that revival at the beginning of the movement. It is likely that the country is slowly answering to the initial pulse of revival of busy life. There has been a large business recently in foreign trade and an immense amount of money has come into the country. This cannot fail to get into circulation, at least in part, and the stimulus thus lent to business is felt all over."

"While it is true that real estate prices went a little beyond their rational mark in this city, some years ago, just as they did in other cities, it is also true that they never went to the extremes they reached elsewhere. Even in Pasadena, Hollywood and Los Angeles prices were much more inflated than in Glendale. Thus when the depression came it did not affect this place to so great a degree as it did those neighboring cities. In fact, the reaction resulted in putting Glendale property on an investment basis and in every possible respect Glendale property compares very favorably with real estate in Los Angeles or the neighboring cities."

"I look to see these conditions improve. Indeed, already there are many inquiries concerning Glendale investments. The city has an excellent reputation. It is admirably clean and has a clean bill of health. It has pure air, fine mountain breezes and the purest water of any place in the vicinity. Its city officials are conscientious and actively concerned with the city's welfare. There is practically no crime. This is a scholastic city, a city of learning and education, and a most desirable dwelling place for those who have children to educate. In short, with all these advantages, it is conceivable that Glendale will shortly show evidences that it is on the rising tide of prosperity."

CHORAL CLUB TO MEET

With the return of the busy fall season, the Glendale Choral club expects to resume work again Monday evening, September 13, under the leadership of Mr. J. D. Poulin. The new music for the season has been selected. The old members are all nearly in line and several new members have been added.

AFTER THE DAIRIES

State Dairy Inspector Ray Hasson and Mr. J. S. Carman, expert of the Los Angeles city laboratory, accompanied by Chief of Police Herald, who have been in Glendale attending to a case of adulteration of milk, are making a tour of the city and neighborhood. Mr. Hasson has achieved quite a reputation as an active and efficient officer and his visit to the neighborhood is a benefit to the milk consumers.

TRUSTEES PROCEEDINGS

LITTLE BUSINESS OF IMPORT-ANCE TRANSACTED AT LAST MEETING

The regular meeting of the board of trustees of the city of Glendale was held in the city hall on Monday evening, August 30. Present: O. A. Lane, chairman of the board, and Trustees Chas. Grist, J. S. Thompson, A. W. Tower and George Williams. Also present: T. W. Watson, city manager; J. C. Sherer, city clerk; W. E. Evans, city attorney; H. B. Lynch, manager of public service department; Edw. M. Lynch, city engineer; G. B. Hoffman, city treasurer, and A. H. Lankford, fire marshal.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, after which communications as follows were read:

Los Angeles society to prevent cruelty to animals requests that the city of Glendale co-operate with their society in preventing cruelty to horses, dogs and other animals. It is the plan of this society to cause to be installed watering fountains at all central points within the county from which animals may get water. On motion the communication was referred to the city manager.

An application from Willard Bott, 1632 Broadway, to sell milk was read and on motion a permit was granted. A communication from Rev. E. H. Willisford of the Parent-Teacher association reminded the trustees that the second payment of the $150 appropriated to help defray the expense of employing playground instructors was due. The bill of $75 was ordered paid.

City Manager T. W. Watson stated that since the last meeting of the board he had interviewed Judge Ross concerning his granting an easement on certain land which the city proposes to improve in the wash.

The recommendation of the board of equalization, which had been in session just prior to the meeting together of the board of trustees, was read and the same was adopted. The recommendation was as follows:

That the tax rate be—
Original Town of Glendale,
general fund$1.00
Library fund08
Fire bond fund05
Street improvement03 1/2
City hall and library bonds03 1/2
Advertising and promotion02 1/2
$1.23

For All Annexed portions,
general fund$1.00
Library fund08
Fire bonds03 1/2
Street improvement bonds03 1/2
Advertising and promotion02 1/2
$1.17 1/2

The question of the proposed extension of Eighth street came up for consideration. The discussion brought out the fact that there is a lack of harmony among the petitioners as to whether the street shall be fifty or sixty feet wide. A motion prevailed that the petition be referred to the citizens' committee, who are requested to prepare a petition that will show clearly the width of the street.

A motion prevailed that when the board adjourns it adjourn to meet Thursday, September 2, at 8:30 o'clock a. m.

H. B. Lynch, manager of the public service department, asked permission to install two fire hydrants, on Brand boulevard between Third and Broadway, instead of one hydrant, as had previously been designated.

At this stage of the proceedings Trustee Grist called for the reading of the minutes of a previous meeting explaining that the complaint had come to him that a paragraph in the minutes had been changed after their adoption by the board. The clerk read the minutes as requested and an explanation revealed the fact that when the board of trustees last February awarded the contract for furnishing water pipe the minutes read that the contract was awarded to the United States Pipe company when it should have read the American Pipe company, as it was to the latter company the contract was let. G. B. Hoffman, who served as minute clerk at that time, was called and he explained that he made the correct notation in his minute book and the error occurred when the stenographer copied the minutes into the city clerk's minute book. Some time later Mr. Hoffman said he discovered the clerical error and he instructed the stenographer to make the change to be in accordance with the actual proceedings of the board and his minutes.

After hearing the case through it was the opinion of the board that the minute clerk acted wisely in requesting the stenographer to make the correction.

NATIONS LEARNING TO SAVE

One of the lessons the war is teaching the nations is to save their surplus income; also to cease wasting food and being extravagant in dress and amusement. The French, always a thrifty nation, have not had so much to learn. The average French peasant is an admirable and economical cook. Henri Quatre's ambition for France that "every French peasant should have a chicken in his pot-au-feu" has been realized in the latter prosperous days of the Republic. Those days, however, are past, just at present. Everything must go to the army; everything must be devoted to the one end of saving the country. So the Frenchman is not living so high as he used to do before the war.

This economy, however is not such a difficult thing for him. He is naturally thrifty. Grim, old Bismarck when he levied his war indemnity of $1,000,000,000 on France after 1871-72, startled and amazed at the ease with which the nation paid off that sum then considered enormous, exclaimed, "If I had only known I would have asked two billions."

Such, however, has not been the case with the British. The dull skies, fogs and constant rainy weather of the British isles have a tendency to evoke a desire for creature comforts to which the Frenchman is a stranger. The Briton likes to make himself comfortable no matter at what expense. His has never been the saving mood; although making money so rapidly as he has done, he has saved quite a great deal.

Now the burden is so great that he must save perforce to meet the needs of the war. Saving is not only a national duty today, it is a necessity. It means the salvation of the country. The British war office must have $5,000,000,000 yearly in order to carry on the war; while its actual revenue is only $1,350,000,000. The people must pay up the balance. That means strict economy. It means that economy must be started right away. That is at the root of all the economies recommended by the government.

In Britain they have a parliamentary savings committee, headed by Premier Asquith, Bonar Law and other prominent leaders of the nation. Assisted by experts on national economy, that committee is telling the people what to save and how to save it. "Suppose that John Bull," says the committee, "had an income of $11,500 a year. After spending money for all his needs he has been able to save $1500 a year; but his aggressive neighbor, John Schmidt suddenly starts a law suit against him. He must now spend $5000 a year. To do this he must either sell his investments; borrow from other people; draw on money he has in the bank; or save out of money he has been accustomed to spend.

Any of the three alternatives will make him in the end poorer than he was. He must adopt the last method, dress less expensively, keep fewer servants, go less frequently to the theatre, smoke and drink less, travel less, buy vegetables with the money he used to pay for flowers, or grow vegetables and flowers in his own garden, besides doing without a great many of the things he formerly considered indispensable.

That is the British government's plan. It will teach its people to save and scrape. During the first six months of the war, Britain imported $2,145,000,000 worth of goods from other countries and sold them only $1,175,000,000. In normal times British business supplies the deficit. In war time there is need for extreme thrift to supply it. H. E. Morgan, chairman of the parliamentary committee for savings said in this connection, "Everyone wants to help his country at a time like this. Flower gardens and lawns must go. Vegetables must take their place. Every lawn must become a potato patch." By this the world can see that the war is on in earnest. John Bull has begun to deny himself.

WHAT JAPAN IS THINKING

Japan has found the war in Europe her opportunity in the Far East and also in the Pacific. Her activities in Manchuria and China have been persistent and far reaching and she does not conceal from the outside world that she believes that it is her mission to control the Pacific. When a country conceives that it has a "mission" it is likely to get into trouble by upholding its right to prosecute that mission. Those who are constantly arguing that war must come between Japan and the United States point out that the Japanese now practically control the commerce of the Pacific ocean and that before they give up any considerable portion of it there is likely to be a conflict. Peace-at-any-price patriots, on the other hand persist in believing that there never can be war between the two countries.

It is likely that both parties are mistaken,—the one in thinking war inevitable; the other in thinking it impossible. Commercial rivalry may seem a peaceable contest of peaceable forces; but it is quite the reverse. Indeed a large proportion of the wars of the world have had as their ultimate cause the desire for commercial supremacy and, at the back of most of the modern wars is the wish to control the international markets.

That being the case it is folly to think that a struggle for the markets of the Pacific will be bloodless. It is likely to prove fully as sanguinary as the struggle now raging in Europe, which has at its root, commercial rivalry. That this desire for commercial supremacy in the Pacific is a dangerous question is seen in what K. K. Kawakami, a Japanese authority, who is well acquainted with American ideals writes in the Japanese American News. Kawakami is rather sarcastic in his recommendation to this country to arm herself to a "reasonable extent," and have "adequate fleets of warships to guard her coasts and to protect her insular possessions." He thinks that it is not desirable "that the American public should feel so utterly unprepared that it has constantly to be raising cries of possible foreign invasion.

Beneath this professed anxiety for the equanimity of this nation, one can easily read the oriental threat. Kawakami says with a great deal of insight into the causes which bring nations to war that the immigration question will not be the issue "which Japan will try to settle by the arbitrament of the sword." He proposes restricted immigration of the Japanese into the United States; fair treatment of them and their naturalization and lastly that the United States shall not object to Japanese commercial enterprise, including immigration in Central and South America.

Should the United States object to that program then Japan will object to American enterprise in Korea, Manchuria and China. That is exactly where the trouble will begin, if it ever does begin. The whole question is one of commerce and that is usually the most dangerous of all international questions and the one most likely to provoke conflict.

What is significant in the matter is that a Japanese of some standing like Kawakami should be so frank and outspoken in his practical challenge of American interests. He is not supposed to be speaking in any official character; but sometimes a straw indicates the course of a stream.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig, who have been the guests of Mrs. I. G. Glenn and family, started early Monday morning in their car on their return trip to their home at Oceanside. Mr. and Mrs. Cole accompanied them and will visit there for awhile.

A fair crowd of fans witnessed the opening game of the new league schedule last Saturday afternoon on the high school diamond, and while the game did not go with the snap that we may expect in the subsequent ones, yet it was an interesting session and a number of good plays were made. Our special reporter gives you the game as he viewed it in his own unique way and appends the scorecard. Several changes in the line-up of the next game is predicted and an interesting contest is promised.

Postmaster Thompson reports that his visit to San Francisco to attend the convention of postmasters last week was a most delightful one and that the convention, which consisted of about two hundred delegates, were shown the time of their lives by the entertainment committee, as well as storing away great "gobs" of useful information in regard to the postal business. During an exchange of speeches our postmaster told them that he had come there to put Burbank on the map, to which the chairman, Postmaster Fay of San Francisco, responded that he had accomplished his purpose and put Burbank on the map all right, but there had been some talk of accusing some one of stealing the name, but as no one seemed willing to press the charge, they would drop the matter for the time being.

Burbank Restaurant Sold

G. W. Sommers has sold the Burbank restaurant, which is located in the new Burbank building, to Walter Buttery of Glendale, who is now in charge. Mr. Buttery is no new hand at the work, having successfully conducted a restaurant in Glendale, where he was very popular owing to the excellent quality of his meals, which he furnished at popular prices. The restaurant will be completely overhauled, repainted and papered, the floor covered with linoleum, new tables and chairs, electric fans installed; in fact, made an up-to-date, sanitary place, which with Mr. Buttery's expert catering will make it one of the most attractive eating places in the city. The location is very convenient and the new management will make a success from the start.

COLLEGE ALUMNI AGAIN WINS

Burbank hooked up with the College Alumni last Saturday in the first game of the new schedule and couldn't stand the gaff. Final score stood 7 to 4 for the Rah-Rahs.

The consensus of opinion among the big minority of eye witnesses of the fray seems to be that more familiar faces among local players would tend to create more enthusiasm among the bleachers, regardless of a fattening of the error column. As it stands, when three or four players tangle up in a mob on the diamond, one can't tell whether it is a Burbank stampee or a Los Angeles rally. Be that as it may, so far as errors are concerned there was some sprinkling throughout the game for all. Lucky was the guy who got off with less than a dozen. The box score is appended in case a careful diagnosis is wanted. However, this was merely a dress rehearsal. The game to be played this Saturday can be looked on as the real life.

EVENTS OF TUESDAY, AUG. 31, 1914, IN THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF EUROPE

One year ago today the war had been going on about a month and the allies were beginning to understand how serious was the task before them. Germany had been so far ahead in preparation for this war that when "the day" came—the day toward which the whole army had been looking forward so long—the Germans with plans all ready for any emergency were battering their way to Paris. Russia was battling fiercely in Galicia with 3,000,000 Austrians and the French and British forces were falling back before overwhelming numbers.

French minister of war issues call for additional reservists, bringing in to the field all men between twenty and forty-eight.

Left wing French army again falls back to avoid engagement on unfavorable ground that might have been decisive.

Germany reports 120,000 Russians killed and 70,000 prisoners taken at Allenstein. Russians claim they have not been seriously checked.

Vienna reports that 3,000,000 men are engaged on Russian-Prussian-Austrian border, with the battle line four hundred miles long.

With the movement toward Lublin a failure and Lemberg taken by the Russians, Austria recalls troops from France.

NORTH GLENDAL

One of the most delightful social affairs of the past week was the monthly social of the Baptist Young People's Union of the First Baptist church, which occurred last Friday evening, the young people going to Latter's canyon, back of the Latter residence at 319 Boynton avenue, Tropic, which was lighted for the occasion with a number of Japanese lanterns, and there enjoying a watermelon feed. About twenty-five members and friends were in attendance and the evening was spent in playing games, social intercourse and having a good time generally. Fruit punch was dispensed throughout the evening and the way the young people got away with watermelons and grapes was, well, a surprise. That the social time was the best ever was the report of those who had the pleasure of the occasion, speaks well for the new social committee, who certainly know how to entertain.

DAIRY RANCHES AND ALFALEA BRING MUCH MONEY INTO THE COMMUNITY

Stretching out to the west and south of Burbank lies a wonderful section of the San Fernando valley, covered with ranch homes, which in the past were mainly devoted to fruit and which still has many prolific orchards of peaches and apricots, while fields of cantaloupes and water-melons have long been a source of income to the ranchers.

The soil is rich and productive, water is abundant and cheap, the climate is ideal, and market facilities cannot be equalled, lying as it does at the very doors of Los Angeles' immense markets.

But in late years conditions have changed. The fruit markets have been overstocked and prices low, and gradually the green fields of alfalfa have spread out over the valley and while there has been a ready market for the baled hay, yet the increased profits to be made by feeding it at home—by changing it into the rich, golden milk—has brought the dairy business to the front, and where a few years ago there were only one or two small dairies, today within less than a two-mile radius we have over fifteen thriving establishments handling over 1000 head of valuable cows and which bring into this locality thousands of dollars each month.

The industry is still in its infancy. One-half of those located here have started within the last eighteen months, and this is only a beginning. Thousands of acres are waiting. The market is here. Los Angeles is shipping in milk from hundreds of miles away. Burbank can and does deliver milk there—fresh, cooled and aerated in less than three hours after milking—and it is freely predicted that within the next five years this locality will be furnishing over 50 per cent of the milk consumed by Los Angeles' million inhabitants.

By the courtesy of one of our leading dairymen, the writer was taken over this territory and visited many of the ranches, and saw for himself the wonderful possibilities of this section; saw the thriving dairies as they are today, with their healthy, perfect cows, their sanitary barns, milk houses and saw, too, the great territory still available and awaiting this most profitable industry.

Mrs. A. Schriener

We first stopped at the Eureka dairy, owned by Mrs. Schriener. It is one of the pioneer dairies of the valley, having started some seven years ago with less than twenty cows, while today they own one of the finest bunches of cattle in the state, some 236 of the choicest Holstein, Jersey and Guernsey cattle, of which at the present time they are milking one hundred and forty-five. The milk as combined makes it ideal for human use.

A. R. Platt

Mr. Platt has but recently come here from Los Angeles and is just getting started. He has a fine lot of cows, seventeen in number, mostly Jerseys. He is milking fourteen at present and sells his product in Los Angeles.

The Hubbell Ranch

From Mr. Platt's home we went to the Hubbell ranch. Mr. Hubbell has just located here, coming from the Imperial valley about three months ago. He has a herd of about fifty Jerseys, Durhams and Holsteins and will increase his herd right along as fast as he can build barn and stable room to care for them. His milk is sold to creameries in Los Angeles.

Shattuck's Dairy

C. E. Shattuck of Glendale has recently moved his herd of about twenty registered Jerseys to this locality. He delivers milk by auto truck to Glendale, where it is distributed to his various customers. Mr. Shattuck is also an extensive breeder of Duroc Jersey hogs.

E. F. Pomeroy

Mr. Pomeroy is one of the older settlers of the valley, but has only been in this business for about a year and a half. He has a fine herd of some thirty-five cows, to which he is constantly adding choice animals. Mr. Pomeroy is very enthusiastic over the prospects of the dairy business in this valley, and is showing his faith by his works, as his barns and buildings are strictly sanitary and up-to-date. He also wholesales his milk to the MacMullin sanitary dairy.

D. B. Wyckoff

Mr. Wyckoff is another old-timer who has changed to the dairy business, which he has been conducting for some three or four years. He milks from fifty to sixty cows and sells the milk to the Martin dairy of Hollywood. His son, W. C. Wyckoff, is in charge and everything is done systematically. They raise practically all their own feed, having a silo of 75-ton capacity, which carries them through the winter season. Their herd consists of Jersey, Holstein and Durhams and the milk tests high.

Mrs. C. T. Phelps

Mrs. Phelps has only been here about five months, but she has a fine herd of some sixty-five cattle, mostly Jerseys and Guernseys, and is rapidly getting things into shape for a profitable business and is proving what a woman can do in this business. The milk is sold to the MacMullin sanitary dairy of Glendale.

C. W. Anderson

We next visited the home of C. W. Anderson on Verdugo avenue. Mr.

Anderson only located here a year ago last March, yet in that time has built up a reputation as the most progressive and leading dairyman of the valley. He makes a specialty of Holsteins and his herd is composed of some of the finest stock to be found in the United States, having the blood or record-making stock throughout the herd. One of Mr. Anderson's cows has a record of 30.54 pounds of butter in seven days. Another cow, when fresh, gave 91 pounds of milk a day, it being necessary to milk her four times daily, and she has a butter record of 44 pounds in seven days.

The male at the head of Mr. Anderson's herd is a nephew of the cow holding the world's record and comes from the D. W. Field herd of Montebello, Mass., the home of many record-breaking animals.

In his equipment the Los Angeles dairy inspector says that here we find the most perfect barn in the county, with everything most conveniently arranged.

Everything from the stables is washed into a cement cistern, from which it is carried out by the irrigating system of underground cement pipes and by the use of gates is delivered as fertilized irrigation water to any part of the farm desired, and that this is a success is shown by the heavy crops on the land. Corn—rich, dark, green, averaging about sixteen feet in height, ears higher than your head, and three or more to the stalk. Mr. Anderson is building a silo of cement and redwood, which will hold enough to furnish him with green feed six months of the year.

This dairy is now producing about 160 gallons of high testing milk a day, which is wholesaled to Glendale and Hollywood.

Thoroughbred Poland China hogs are kept as a side issue on this ranch and find a ready sale.

J. A. Somers

Mr. Somers is another young man just starting in the dairy business having only located here last May. He has a fine looking herd of Holsteins and is now milking about 28 head, the milk being sold to the Los Angeles creamery. Everything here is being built with the idea of enlarging right along as it is made possible.

Mr. Somers has an ideal location, joining the Los Angeles river and Griffith park. He has twenty-five acres in alfalfa, which is cut and fed green.

A. S. Martin

We found Mr. Martin busy at work building a new barn and also a silo, which is along different lines of Mr. Martin's own making, consisting of two-by-threes set edgewise. These will be covered on both sides by metal lath, which will receive a cement coat. The result will be watched with interest by Mr. Martin's neighbors. Mr. Martin has a herd of sixteen, mostly Jerseys, and the milk is sold in Hollywood.

A. V. Handorf

The Handorf dairy is one of the largest and most important of this section. They own their large ranch, raising their own feed. A silo holding nearly 500 tons, being an important adjunct to their fine equipment. They have a herd of 350 cattle, about one-half of which are milkers. Large barns and outbuildings afford ample room and everything is strictly sanitary. Their product is wholesaled to the Los Angeles creamery.

Coffin & Son

This firm has the finest outfit in the valley, everything pertaining to the model creamery and dairy being at hand. No pains or expense is spared in caring for the cows and the milk itself is so treated that absolute purity and cleanliness is the result. Electric power is used in every department. They are milking about sixty cows at the present time, mostly Holsteins and Jerseys, and their product goes to the exclusive high-class hotel trade.

According to the Los Angeles Times the average net price received by the producer last season for California navel oranges was eighty-five cents per box, the average cost of production eighty-six cents.
